Medford, MA August 3, 2009: The Burns Companies, a real estate development services company for commercial and investor-owned properties, today announce that founder Andrew Burns and associate Dee Regan have received LEED Accredited Professional (AP) and Massachusetts Certified Public Purchasing Official (MCPPO) Accreditation. Burns and Regan were certified by the US Green Building Council (USGBC) in LEED AP for New Construction & Major Renovations Credentials which provides a standard for professionals participating in the design and construction phases of high-performance, healthful, durable, affordable, and environmentally sound commercial, institutional, and high-rise residential buildings. Regan received accreditation by the Massachusetts Office of the Inspector General as Certified Public Purchasing Official (MCPPO), which sets standards for professionalism and excellence in public procurement.

“As carbon footprint ratings gain importance along with procurement challenges to support these goals, achieving LEED AP and MCPPO credentials are important for our business,” stated Andrew Burns, Founder and President of The Burns Companies. “We act as owner’s representatives for our clients which means we make critical buying and spending decisions, especially as it relates to environmental impact. Both status’ enables us to consult effectively with owners, design professionals, and contractors who require guidance on achieving LEED status and on following MCPPO guidelines for projects and we focus our efforts on meeting these standards as each project requires.”
